Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

OpenQuestion,

Valid points. Whether calling or posting derogatory things, it is the same. Just SoapBoxMom's comment about the Mustard Seed yesterday, as if somehow that was not great work, is reason enough and to have her belittle charities doing great work, as well as speakers themselves, is the reason she will not get that list. Every speaker is a millionaire and many are many, many times over. In addition, as I have shared on numerous occasions, there have been 18 charities supported just from the past 3 MMC's and as an independent representative, I do not keep a list myself.

Open, I guess there will always be the distrust on this board. If I say I made $300,000 with AC, SoapBoxMom can just say show us your 1099. Of course I am not going to share my 1099 and personal details with someone like SoapBoxMom, so she can then claim, liar, scammer, goon, thief, I am trying to think of some more of her inaccuracies. There is no winning with someone like SoapBoxMom. You post those things, then it is something else and so on.

If there is anyone interested in AC here, simply go through the 3 steps, read the thread and know that there are people who are anti- any networking marketing, many that are against having your faith first in business, and some people who believe the complete opposite. If you are looking for a get rich quick scheme, go somewhere else as there is no such thing. This is a long term business and you need to have a peace about building any business, otherwise don't.

Fair enough?

Hey, if you let me go to the next conference for free, I'd be happy to report on everything -- you know how thorough and honest I am! :) No? Hey, I tried.

There MUST be distrust on a board such as this, as we simply do not know whom we are speaking with. Honestly, to trust someone here based on an anonymous post would be foolhardy. But hey, you can blank out your name and post your 1099 if you want. That would be interesting.

There has to be room in the world for all opinions, and yep, that is fair enough for me.

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Back to Soapboxdad's criticism of the BBB. I found these Official Acknowledgements post on their website. Most of them have to do with their BBB Auto Line Program..

"...offering the BBB AUTO LINE mediation and arbitration service to GM's retail customers has helped make General Motors a better business and thereby to make General Motor's business better."

T. A. Gottschalk, Senior Vice President & General Counsel, General Motors

"...arbitrators of the Alternative Dispute Resolution Division in the Better Business Bureau are helping us meet this important challenge, saving many Americans valuable time and money. Through hard work and dedication, these volunteers settle conflicts for countless businesses and consumers, letting the wheels of our economy continue to run smoothly."

President Bill Clinton

"In announcing the [California Department of Consumer Affairs] survey results, the department praised the Better Business Bureau program for demonstrating 'above-average consistency...'We think the question of fairness goes directly to the opportunity for an oral hearing...to give consumers their day in court,' said Peter Brightbill, chief of the department's arbitration review program. 'The survey numbers bear this out.'"

The Los Angeles Times, Friday, September 3, 1993

"One of the best arbitration programs there is today is the BBB AUTO LINE program..."

Honorable Lee Fisher, Ohio Attorney General

"Your work as decision-makers in arbitration hearings--where you listen, consider, and carefully help people solve their problems peacefully--is a gift to the community."

Sorry, but that list of charities is honest disclosure that the public has a right to expect since you and Timmy keep insisting that this work for God's Kingdom is happening. Honest reputable people would happily provide the names of these organizations.

Are you completely out to lunch? I didn't belittle the charity. I am questioning whether Timmy gave to this charity as he didn't have the name correct on his website. Remember none of the charities as listed checked out.

If you and Timmy choose to make claims you are morally bound as an honest Christians to back them up. If you don't remember all the names ask for the few you can't remember. If Timmy won't disclose the names of the charities then we will all have to assume they are bogus and the donations are figments of Tim's vivid imagination. Perhaps you and Timmy should be sued for misrepresentation. If these charities are bogus and the donations are fictitious that would be actionable, now wouldn't it, boys? I guess you better honestly come forward with some facts!

Sometimes I wonder where your head is. How the heck is THIS defending anyone? There is simply no law suit in anything said on this site. It is virtually IMPOSSIBLE. Your positioning this as a defense of anyone just doesn't make any sense. In regards to SBM and her assertion that this is an illegal pyramid? That is a very complex legal issue that I would not be able to comment intelligently upon. The DA would have to make that call. But even a layman like me knows that nothing said on this site is going to get anyone sued. At least not successfully.

How about the speakers names and credentials and the earnings for the reps while you are at it. Tell Timmy I am ready to debate him![/B]

So, yes Mam you did call them bogus. I posted earlier that this was extremely offensive to me as I am familiar with a serious disease (Antley Bixler Syndrome) represented by a foundation that Mr. Darnell and his company supported financially. That is fact. I saw the Please retract your disgusting remarks. I know the pain that my neighbors went through in losing their son. To call the charity they support in his memory 'bogus' is an abomination.

The owners of Scam.com have a cash cow as they have pay per click ads all over their site and as instigators like you get more people visiting to refute your garbage, they make massive revenue from Google.

Yes, Phinnly, according to your beliefs, we should take any Christian teaching out of prisons. That says it all. Christianity is a scam according to you. Enough said.

Ok, the voice of reason is jumping in here again before everyone's heads explode. If indeed this is a legitimate charity, then SBM should CERTAINLY come on here and admit that mistake, which I hope was an honest one. But unfortunately, though we'd all love to believe what was said by the nice person above, we have NO way of verifying whether or not it is true. All we have are words on a page. So again, this has NOT been proven to be a lie/inaccuracy, though we certainly all hope the charity is a good one...and if indeed it is, the writer has a right to be p*ssed and is entitled to some form of an apology on THAT point, once it has been proven. How's that for good old-fashioned logic?

Of course you did not read the detail of the article.

To summarize the court has decided that faith based organizations funded with tax dollars can not preach one religion [and only evangelical Christianity in this case] to a captive audience in a state run institution [correctional facility]...without violating the separation of church and state

If you chose to sponsor bible classes in prison[with your money or private donations] to prisoners who volunteer to attend and the correctional facility approves this would be perfectly legal.

Re: Advantage Conferences, is it Legal and ethical in its use of Religion?

Wishyouknew, your survey #1 is asking on a scam site that simply attracts folks that are anti-network marketing. Let's get that straight first. #2 if you knew how to write a survey (and I am not referring to your fine spelling either) you would know that you stacked the deck by asking leading questions and essentially every question in the negative except for one. OpenQuestion, I am surprised you were silent on that when you saw the survey as you try to assess as fairly as you are able. Lastly, one does not need to be around here long to hear people that have a hard time with Christians as well (just read Phinnly and Renloyx's posts). Mix in in your survey pot and you got a lot of junk.

For the last time, it is not about mixing "religion" as you reference and "using" it in business as you also lead in your question. We are a Christ-centered organization and that has nothing to do with religion. It is about a personal relationship with our Lord and Savior and operating our businesses with the proper focus and priorities. I am sorry that you simply cannot understand this.

I love this. On the one hand we have SoapBoxDad who gives me a pretty good idea that he is a Christian from the tone of his posts. If a little extreme in the castigation department. I make no comment on his stand with regard to Advantage Conferences, because I don't know the inner workings of his company. Remember I came on here just to see what was going on and found the post from SBM lying about a bonafide charity. That will not stand in my book and should be condemned.

On the other hand we have PSB who can't tell the difference (by the way just like our judicial system now) between Christianity and religion. My misguided friend you and the courts have lost sight of what the Founding Fathers meant by the separation of church (not God) and state. I feel very sorry for you.

The cancelled check etc. would be great. The problem is that I believe that charity was on the list that has since been removed and that being the case it is not a legitimate charity. I am not saying the condition doesn't exist or that the family hasn't suffered a terrible loss. I am saying that all the charities funded should be legitimate registered ones and if all these movers and shakers, lawyers and MBAs are running around they should help anyone in need get registered as a charity or foundation so both the donor and recipient will get the much needed tax advantages. This whole sob story is ludicrous when AC has removed the charities names and still refuses to post the names of these 18 or more chairites they say are supported. Are you suggesting they are claiming deductions on their taxes for donations that cannot be legally taken according to the IRS as the charities aren't legitimate? Or are they not reporting the income on the recipients end as they haven't been granted exempt status. These millionaires in this venture are completely worthless if they don't understand the tax or legal implications here! To claim the organization is a charity when it is not is misrepresentation and fraud! Timmy is about to get some lessons in jurisprudence he ain't gonna like.

SBM,

How do you know whether or not the charity is registered. Have you any idea how long it takes to register a 501(3)c foundation. 18 months to 2 years. I am familiar with the red tape, rigmarole and 'passing through the eye of a needle' that has to happen in order to register. It's very possible that registration is in process and you don't know about it. In fact as you appear to be critisizing this company from a distance and from hearsay, you don't appear to know much of anything. All you have done is be vitriolic about things you have a little knowledge about and ask for SBD to share information on a thread that goes from extreme pro AC (SBD) to mainly extreme anti AC (you, WYK and the weird one Renloyx - whats with "Child Molestation Expert" as a title. Shudder!!). What can SBD possibly gain by sharing pertinent info here. After all it's titled 'Scam.com'. The main posters on sites like these are going to be the moaners and quakers not movers and shakers.

SBD, I hate to say this, but I think you're spinning your wheels pal!

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

wheatfromchaff,

What you say about the time to register is not the point. The old AC pages had a number of charities listed and they all were bogus. We are talking around a dozen or so I recall that were removed when an attorney at Quatloos and I discovered they were non-existent. You ask "What can SBD possibly gain by sharing pertinent info here." If the company is legitimate all the information requested would be public knowledge. This scam has a lot to hide. Let's be serious here. Melaleuca which boasts 54% of reps earning only $8.67 a months publicly discloses their earnings tables. When my husband's company sends him to business conferences everyone knows before hand all the speakers and their credentials, education, experience and certifications. Why on earth would anyone pay 10 grand when AC doesn't honestly disclose what you are paying for. My husbands company has charitable endeavors, but the names of the charities are disclosed as well as the contribution amounts. They are always legitimate registered charities, so every thing is above board and everything is tax deductible. So, quit defending this sham of a company and if you want to sing its praises come on here with some facts!

Tell you what, having seen the check made payable to the organization I will ask if I can get a copy of it with the private info blocked out. Open question would that be satisfactory to you as evidence of a lie on SBMs part?

Sigh A lie is when someone KNOWS something is not true, yet repeats it anyway. If this is a legitimate charity and that fact is proveable, I GUARANTEE you that SBM will own up to that -- as an inaccuracy. A check would prove that this company gives to charity, sure. Whether that meets her definition of a "legitimate" charity is anyone's guess. But for the umpteenth time, that ain't got nuthin' to do with the price of beans in Peru to me. I absolutely believe this company gives money to what they feel are good causes. Which means...what, exactly in regards to the discussion of this "business opportunity?"

As SBD has said, there are people here who believe this company is a total sham. There are those who believe exactly the opposite. And there are those in the middle. Hence, emotions run high. But if good information is provided here, it has been worth the effort.

If the charities listed on that site were NONEXISTENT, that is a FAR cry from them being not registered or legitimate in the eyes of the government. If proven -- which it has NOT been as yet -- this would constitute FRAUD. And honestly, SBDs refusal to list those charities -- and his reasons for not doing so -- simply do not hold water. They are illogical. NO ONE is going to "harass" those people in any way, as we are NOT a bunch of morons or zealots here. Simply, folks would like to RESEARCH these charities and learn if they (first of all) actually EXIST, and (secondly) if they are legitimately helping people. If you wonder why we question some of the things done and said here, this particular point is a BIG clue.

You are right, it is not a lie because she does not knowingly repeat something she knows to be false. Ignorance does not a liar make. OK Brainiac 5, satisfied. I hope your extreme intellect can accept that I understand it now with my limited brain power!! The reality of the situation is this, the charity is real, I will attempt to get proof of that and post it here. OK?.
