Shudder!!). What can SBD possibly gain by sharing pertinent info here. After all it's titled 'Scam.com'. I actually think its great that Tim donates money to charities. There is certainly nothing wrong with that. But, that still does not make it legal or right to scam others out of money. He is not Robin Hood.

If Tim is so "free" with his money to give it to charities, why does he have to be such a jerk when people ask for a refund.

I think his giving to charities is a ploy to gain the trust of the AC reps.. But, that's my opinion.

One more thing. I did not come on this thread to support or attack AC or the people who run it. I can do neither because I do not have the facts at my disposal. My concern was the charity issue and putting the record straight.

That would do two things that are relevant to this thread:

1. Add some credibility to the AC cause
2. Debunk the shrill attitude of SBM. she is the only I'm concerned about.

But you folks have really got my interest now professionally. If AC is the real deal then you guys need to shut up. If on the other hand it's a scam then it needs to be exposed. So far this thread contains hearsay, accusations, criticisms and venom on both sides.

By the way Renloxx, If you were the last person on the planet and the choice was between you and a skunk I'd place the skunk in charge of my children before you skippy.

If the charities listed on that site were NONEXISTENT, that is a FAR cry from them being not registered or legitimate in the eyes of the government. If proven -- which it has NOT been as yet -- this would constitute FRAUD. And honestly, SBDs refusal to list those charities -- and his reasons for not doing so -- simply do not hold water. They are illogical. NO ONE is going to "harass" those people in any way, as we are NOT a bunch of morons or zealots here. Simply, folks would like to RESEARCH these charities and learn if they (first of all) actually EXIST, and (secondly) if they are legitimately helping people. If you wonder why we question some of the things done and said here, this particular point is a BIG clue.*

I personally know of a good deal of charties that the CEO or President of the charity is pocketing alot of the money. I am not saying that is happening with any of these charities.

There is actually a Charity in Tim's home town of Allen, TX where %90 of the funds raised go straight to the presidents pocket book.

My point in saying this is.. Just because its called a charity and it is suppose to be for a good cause. Does not mean that a majority of the money collected actually goes to the cause it is suppose to.

If AC was the "real deal" why would he sue the BBB? Why would some of the reps file complaints with the BBB and AG..? Why would Tim have made some major marketing changes to his website.

This is the question that is really the heart of the issue of why this is a illegal pyramid scheme.

Would you pay $10,000 to attend a conference that did not include a licesensed financial advisor, hotel room, travel expenses, and food???

The answer is of course you would not. No logical person would.

So therefore you must be paying the money for the ability to particpate in a illiegal money game.

This is called a illegal pyramid scam punishable by 3 years of prison time!
The so called product does not have the market value of $10,000..

WishYouKnew,

Thats a very good point. You have to be careful donating to anything these days. Its such a shame that there's so much dishonesty in business. People are getting blasted for things they are falsely accused of and getting off scot free for stuff they are blatantly guilty of.

I'm going to check into AC myself. There are a few people on here like Open Question who seem to be seeking truth albeit with a very condescending attitude OQ. So i'm goig to stick my nose into this and see if I can gain some sense out of it.

They don't know me so maybe I'll become a Rep and find out what's going on.

Actually there are plenty of conferences that cost that much and more. that is not the issue in my mind. The issue is this:

Is the AC conference itself as a product worth the $10,000?

Who is buying this product right now?

Is it retail sales or is it only purchased as an enabling tool for the Rep to make his commission?

If its only being purchased by Reps then theres a case to be made for the company being a pyramid. If it is being purchased by customers then it's not a pyramid?

I think you've hit the nail on the head.

What percentage of total sales comes from people who are not affiliates of the company? This isn't anything that needs to be kept secret, is it? I can't think of any reason whatsoever outside of the one wheatfromchaff lists above.

Are your valuable assets fully protected or are you a "sitting duck" for unfriendly predators? You may think it could never happen to you, but the fact is, devastating lawsuits occur by the tens of thousands EVERY SINGLE DAY to unsuspecting, "nice" people. You cannot afford to be cavalier regarding essential protection of your estate!

According to the US Justice Department, over 100,000,000 lawsuits are pending in the combined State and Federal Courts in the United States

It is estimated that more than 16,000,000 lawsuits are filed annually

A lawsuit is filed every 1.75 seconds in this country, according to the American Bar Association!

Is it possible YOU could be the target of one of those suits? Consider:

94% of the world's lawsuits are filed in the US

Statistics suggest that you will be sued an average of five times in your lifetime...and that number triples if you earn over $50,000 per year

Now, the only question is how many of these lawsuits is Timmy responsible for???? Well, Mr. Litigious are you going to add me to the grim statistics???? LOL

To answer your questions of course the product is not worth the money. Ask anyone if they would pay the money and not be a rep.. Of course not.

No body in the right mind would pay that.

Its not at all in retail stores.

You can get the same info from a $20 book at Barnes and Noble.

The conferences is just a "smoke screen" to participate in an illegal Money game.

To make seem even more legitimate, Tim has thrown in the distribution rights to his Christian Fluff Book.

Lets say for example Mary Kay decided not to charge "market value" for their product.

And Lets say for the purpose of this example that each product was now being sold for $1,000 each.

This would make anyone who was not a rep of course Not buy the product! Every female of course would just go to Foleys or Dillards to buy their make-up.

Now only Reps are buying the product.

Are you buying the product because it has the value of $1,000. of course you would not be. You would be buying it to be a rep and to participate in an illegal money game.

This would now make it borderline illegal instead of a legit MLM company. Make sense?

I have a question for SBD..

What is Chris Reeds Role in "The Fundraising Advantage"

From speaking to Mr. Reed he mentioned that his previous job before teaming up with AC was working for a Credit Card Proccessing company out of California that was very unethical.

Besides the fact that Tim Donates money to the charity of the speakers choice..

What exactly is the goal of TFA.. Lets face it. The explanation on the website is kinda worded in general terms.

Is Tim looking to leverage these charties and treat them like a rep for volunteers of the charities to get envolved and sign up others to raise money for the charities? Is this the idea?

Off the subject, when you make a boldface lie. Wish, I read your previous posts and I do not even think they are worth the bandwidth to respond to. The value of the MMC, our product and mentoring far exceeds the cost of the conferences, and so on. You stated that you were in the business, so who were the speakers when you attended?

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Wishyouknew, market value is what the market will bare for any product. A Harvard education cost "x" and the person expects to take what they learn and earn many times "x" with it.

This was shared from Letyourlightshine prior and I am sorry to have to rehash, but the same tired arguments keep surfacing.

Here is just some of what a rep who decides to purchase the MMC-IV receives. It is important as a legal test that there is NO purchase ever required. I would have paid several times the cost of the conference for what I have already received value wise.

- MMC-IV conference ticket that includes a spouse at no additional charge
- MMC Advantage Program where they can attend all subsequent MMC's for 90% off
- Over 100 Hours of training calls annually
- 52 Millionaire Mindset Conference Calls annually
- A turnkey website and 3 Step System

--A Rep Resource Center for training and access to archived calls
--Full Distribution Rights to Slay Your Giant
--Ongoing mentoring and training--this is a tremendous part of the value proposition

You would not have perceived or received this value as it appears that you never attended a conference, you admit to attending a few calls, and it was probably not a good fit for you to even start--if you indeed did.

Re: Advantage Conferences, is it Legal and ethical in its use of Religion?

Where did you get your MBA by the way? Just curious as you should be able to formulate a survey that had integrity where you were not just looking for the answers that you wanted to hear. Oh yeh, that's not the point here is it? Opinions > the truth.

[quote=SoapBoxDad]Wishyouknew, market value is what the market will bare for any product. A Harvard education cost "x" and the person expects to take what they learn and earn many times "x" with it.

You actually just proved my point. The Value is not in the product its self. Its in the ability to earn many times the amount in signing up others..

The Product Stand ALONE does not have a MARKET VALUE.

The diffrence also with your example of Harvard. Is that Harvard Students are not out recruiting other students and collecting commssions from tuition.

You could also argue that not every Harvard student is going to college with the aspirations of being rich.

I give you a hint. I got it from the Oldest school in the Metroplex here in the Dallas/ Fort Worth area.. I also went there on undergrad and was on full athletic scholarship.

Again, thats like a Mary Kay rep saying. "Well I am selling this product but, I have never once used any of it. I don't honestly know how great it is. Evreyone keeps telling me its great" That person is going to have a much harder time selling anything.. Would you not agree???

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

The MMC has value that far exceeds the cost and over 200 representatives have already experienced it. Obviously, you have not. The product stands on it's own and you can pay that just for the coaching and mentoring that takes place every week. Your assumptions in regards value are false and yet another opinion.

You would not have perceived or received this value as it appears that you never attended a conference, you admit to attending a few calls, and it was probably not a good fit for you to even start--if you indeed did.

Here is just some of what a rep who decides to purchase the MMC-IV receives. It is important as a legal test that there is NO purchase ever required. I would have paid several times the cost of the conference for what I have already received value wise.

--MMC-IV conference ticket that includes a spouse at no additional charge

- MMC Advantage Program where they can attend all subsequent MMC's for 90% off
- Over 100 Hours of training calls annually
- 52 Millionaire Mindset Conference Calls annually
- A turnkey website and 3 Step System
- A Rep Resource Center for training and access to archived calls
- Full Distribution Rights to Slay Your Giant
- Ongoing mentoring and training--this is a tremendous part of the value proposition

I did not at all Percieve the Value to be worth that. I don't need coaching or mentoring. Thats one of the reasons I got out. You can make assumptions all you want. But Do you know the old saying abuot people who ASS-u-ME things?

To help measure Market Value, can you tell me another conference that has a price tag of $10,000 with a similar nature?

Gee, getting a little huffy here, aren't we? The problem is that you are quick to call people LIARS when in reality, as you have admitted, they are simply being inaccurate, we hope honestly. To call someone a LIAR is quite insulting and frankly, un-Christian. So isn't it better that you CLARIFY and STOP insulting people until you are sure they DESERVE it?

Just curious, but specifically what other conferences have you seen that cost that kind of coin? To me, that's a pretty lot of money.

I'm not going to go back and check, and there is no need to repost. If you say you did not make that claim -- and in fact, you are saying that right here and now with THIS post -- I believe you, and she should lay off that assertion. So there.

Ok, good work. Now the ball is in SBM's court. She can now investigate these charities and tell us why -- or why not -- they should be considered legitimate. We eagerly await her research.

Open Question

Sorry OQ I was testy and defensive. I do not like being wrong, but will admit it when I am. Nuff said?

Does not alter the fact she still claims the charities to be bogus. I plan to have that refuted.
Agreed?
