

[illegible]

scams (<http://www.scam.com/index.php>)

- Unlucky36

07-07-2006 08:43 AM

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

Originally Posted by yossarian

renloyx isn't a Christian... and yes, he is.

while we don't agree on matters of religion, I've grown to love his catch-phrase.

Come on ren, haven't seen it for awhile... let's have it! :D

just four little words...

Renloxx is totally cool. What I like about him: he never preaches, he never brags about his work or how much money he makes He walks the walk. And most of all he tells it like it is. And what he and I have in common, we hate scammers! :D

vamapega

07-07-2006 08:46 AM

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by Unlucky36

Renloyx is totally cool. What I like about him: he never preaches, he never brags about his work or how much money he makes He walks the walk. And most of all he tells it like it is. And what he and I have in common, we hate scammers! :D

---

Well, I can't say that I hate scammers; but I will say that I have a strong disliking towards them. What I do hate however, is a lie, especially when it is manifested in the form of good advice.

renloyx

07-07-2006 08:54 AM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by vamapega

Actually, although I'm not sure about AC at this point, my biggest contention is the cost that one has to afford to make $7000 over and over again. $10,000 is a lot of money.

---

I will sell you a money making system for $1000. With my system you cant fail because its Approved By Jesus. I will only sell my magic system to the first 5 people who send me a pm. Dont miss out on an amazing opportunity. Only losers are afraid of losing $1000. Its only $1000!!! If you cant afford to lose $1000 youre a loser and deserve to die in lava©. Whats $1000 when you can make $2000 over and over again. I cant tell you how until you pay but my program is Approved By Jesus so just shut up and send me your money now. Only nerds and losers dont buy my system and stay broke. Real christians dont ask for facts or proof. Anyone who asks for proof or facts is going TO HELL like the gays and the minorities!!! Do you want to go to hell? Then shut up and send me your money! If you believe in Jesus and want to get rich without working send me $1000 today! Only a retarded monkey cant make my program work. Nobody fails! Everyone makes money! Send me your money!!!! NOW!!!

the411

07-07-2006 08:57 AM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Posted by 411

Vamapega,

If you are truly unbiased and pursuing the truth, will you take it upon yourself to call Tim Darnell and ask him personally the tough questions?

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by vamapega

Actually, although I'm not sure about AC at this point, my biggest contention is the cost that one has to afford to make $7000 over and over again. $10,000 is a lot of money.

---

I thought you were here for the truth? Why would you not want to seek the truth?

Maybe the truth will uncover that $10,000 is chump change. And that you can make a million dollars in the next year with Advantage Conferences. All it takes is thinking like a millionaire....

yossarian

07-07-2006 08:57 AM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by renloyx

youre a loser and deserve to die in lava©.

---

LOL, the copyright symbol is a nice touch.

Unlucky36

07-07-2006 09:00 AM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by yossarian

LOL, the copyright symbol is a nice touch.

---

HAHAHA :D Damn! This is funnier than Caddyshack :D

txfan

07-07-2006 09:03 AM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by renloyx

I will sell you a money making system for $1000. With my system you cant fail because its Approved By Jesus. I will only sell my magic system to the first 5 people who send me a pm. Dont miss out on an amazing opportunity. Only losers are afraid of losing $1000. Its only $1000!!! If you cant afford to lose $1000 youre a loser and deserve to die in lava©. Whats $1000 when you can make $2000 over and over again. I cant tell you how until you pay but my program is Approved By Jesus so just shut up and send me your money now. Only nerds and losers dont buy my system and stay broke. Real christians dont ask for facts or proof. Anyone who asks for proof or facts is going TO HELL like the gays and the minorities!!! Do you want to go to hell? Then shut up and send me your money! If you believe in Jesus and want to get rich without working send me $1000 today! Only a retarded monkey cant make my program work. Nobody fails! Everyone makes money! Send me your money!!!! NOW!!!

---

I just searched the bbb for Jesus juice and didn't find any complaints in the last 3 years, so it must be legit and a good opportunity. Sign me up!

vamapega

07-07-2006 09:03 AM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by yossarian
LOL, the copyright symbol is a nice touch.

---

I didn't find anything that he had said in that post to be useful, not even for amusement.

And if you are a Christian, I would advise you not to encourage such behavior as he has displayed.

vamapega

07-07-2006 09:09 AM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

It never fails...

When people lose an argument that is when they often begin to use ad hominem to dash their opponent to pieces.

I had hoped that we could maintain a mature discussion in here.

Interestingly, you can usually tell when someone is speaking the truth by the manner in which he addresses you. Now there's something to think about...

vamapega

07-07-2006 09:18 AM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by the411

Posted by 411

Vamapega,

If you are truly unbiased and pursuing the truth, will you take it upon yourself to call Tim Darnell and ask him personally the tough questions?

I thought you were here for the truth? Why would you not want to seek the truth?

Maybe the truth will uncover that $10,000 is chump change. And that you can make a million dollars in the next year with Advantage Conferences. All it takes is thinking like a millionaire....

---

I trust that God will speak to me concerning this. If it is His will that I pursue it, then it won't be for my success alone that He urges me on to carry out such work.

Yet, if God's hand really isn't in this work, all of the money in the world wouldn't be worth losing my soul for.

renloyx

07-07-2006 09:23 AM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by vamapega

I trust that God will speak to me concerning this.

---

So voices in your head tell you what to do?

renloyx

07-07-2006 09:55 AM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by vamapega

It never fails...

When people lose an argument that is when they often begin to use ad hominem to dash their opponent to pieces.

---

Quote:

---

Very few people are going to cough up $10000 without any proof or info about the speakers at the conference (thats why ac has 500 reps and 300 sales). Posting some proof and some info about the conference here and on their sites would probably get ac thousands of new reps and millions of $ in sales.

Why would AC give up millions of $ in sales if they have nothing to hide?

---

.....

Wishyouknew

07-07-2006 04:31 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by vamapega

You seem to be very angry. In fact, I am concerned that you would even say what you had said above in the tone with which you stated it.

It is almost as if there is a suppressed threat in the statement above. You ought to be careful to guard what you say. More importantly, you ought to ask God to remove that hatred from your heart before it gives birth to something that you will regret for the rest of your life.

---

Vamapega,

You should stop assumeing so much. Assumptions are bad..

Wishyouknew

07-07-2006 04:35 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by deepsouth

Okay, AC members. How many of you received $7,000 checks this past month? Another question: How many of you that are not on the videos received checks this past month?

That's a fair and honest question.

---

If potential reps ask that question.. they will get nothing but lies and false statements.

Do I hate Tim Darnell, no.. Hate is a strong word.

Do I have zero respect for someone who lies and scams and targets honest christian people out of $10,000. YES!!

Wishyouknew

07-07-2006 04:38 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by renloyx

I will sell you a money making system for $1000. With my system you cant fail because its Approved By Jesus. I will only sell my magic system to the first 5 people who send me a pm. Dont miss out on an amazing opportunity. Only losers are afraid of losing $1000. Its only $1000!!! If you cant afford to lose $1000 youre a loser and deserve to die in lava©. Whats $1000 when you can make $2000 over and over again. I cant tell you how until you pay but my program is Approved By Jesus so just shut up and send me your money now. Only nerds and losers dont buy my system and stay broke. Real christians dont ask for facts or proof. Anyone who asks for proof or facts is going TO HELL like the gays and the minorities!!! Do you want to go to hell? Then shut up and send me your money! If you believe in Jesus and want to get rich without working send me $1000 today! Only a retarded monkey cant make my program work. Nobody fails! Everyone makes money! Send me your money!!!! NOW!!!

---

renloyx, I am starting to think you are Tim Darnell.. LOL...

openQuestion

07-07-2006 05:33 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by vamapega

I trust that God will speak to me concerning this. If it is His will that I pursue it, then it won't be for my success alone that He urges me on to carry out such work.

Yet, if God's hand really isn't in this work, all of the money in the world wouldn't be worth losing my soul for.

---

vamapega, I think I've been as fair and unbiased as just about anyone on this thread. But you, my friend, are going to break your back trying to bend over that far to be "fair". There have been some compelling facts about this company posted on this thread, and a lot of opinions. The "single BBB complaint" thing is such a tiny, tiny point that I can hardly believe you would use that and that alone to come to a decision about this. The jury will ALWAYS be out on this one (and on many others of this ilk) simply because the companies themselves refuse to provide factual backing and real numbers. And it is on THEM to provide this, as they are asking people to make (in this case) a major investment, one which you yourself admitted you could never afford. Before I invested that kind of money in anything, I would need to see a LOT of numbers, X's and O's. Trust me: they will NOT be forthcoming. They would be bad for business.

yossarian

07-07-2006 05:54 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by vamapega

I didn't find anything that he had said in that post to be useful, not even for amusement.

And if you are a Christian, I would advise you not to encourage such behavior as he has displayed.

---

...What are you, the Posting Police? I bet you were hall monitor at your high school, huh?

The following illustrates one of the many problems I have with AC, as posted on page 3 of this thread.

After viewing the site, I suppose I don't have a problem with the actual product the company is selling.

They seem to offer solid, common sense advice from millionaires about running a business and making investment decisions. I don't doubt that their product has some value, but I'm fairly confident that any and all advice offered can be found with a little diligent searching at one's local Barnes and Noble.

As a Christian, the problem I have with this company is the use of Christianity as a marketing asset.

There is a letter found on the opening page in which Mr. Darnell describes the gift of God's abundance as something we should strive for, not shy away from.

Quote:

---

The vast majority of peoples' thinking regarding the concepts of income, finances, having wealth, giving, and money in general is seriously flawed. To not live abundantly or accept abundance in the midst of God's abundant provisions surrounding each of us is simply wrong. We can and will experience abundance when we shed antiquated fears and misconceptions that society promulgates regarding money and income. Subsequently, we can learn to become much better and bigger receivers, givers, and contributors to society, ministries and our fellow man.

---

I have seen this argument in a variety of forms, (and the catch-word "abundance" is almost always utilized), none of which sit very well with me as a Christian. In a round about way, it is saying that God wants you to be rich, so don't feel guilty about seeking wealth. Oh, and by the way, buy our product – it's God-approved.

I'm not saying that God doesn't want people to be rich; I'm sure that is in his plan for some people. He certainly wants us to manage our finances responsibly and give openly.

But in my opinion, he does not smile down on those who profit by blatantly taking advantage of their connection to other people within the faith.

Remember, the only account in the Bible of Christ violently losing his temper was in the temple market, where he turned over the tables of money-changers and traders.

*When I wrote the above post, I was not aware of the high cost of the program, which in my estimation is grossly exorbitant for the service provided.***

Quote:

Quote:

---

Tim there is a growing band of brothers and sisters in Christ who support you and the awesome Christian Movement you are leading. God is not threatened by the negativity on this pathetic thread and He will be glorified in your fight and He will prevail. We love you brother and will stand by you as witnesses for and to His Glory!

---

I got a cold chill when I read this. It reminded me of the kind of rhetoric spouted by followers of David Koresh prior to the Branch Davidian incident.

Tim is exploiting your faith in God to line his own pockets. Religious scams have always been, and will continue to be, among the most popular because they are by far the easiest to pull off. They provide a built-in captive audience; you need only mention the name of God and the suckers come in droves like moths to a flame.

Again, I suggest you read what has already been written before taking even the slightest step to defend these characters.

yossarian

07-07-2006 06:01 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

I wrote the following post in response to SBD's claim that their President's interview was "unique" to their business and served to filter out people who really aren't cut out for AC.

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by SoapBoxDad

SoapBoxMom, leave it to you to twist the truth and make something that is unique in the industry to prevent all the abuses out there, and make it bad. I guess I should expect that. I know OpenQuestion thinks this is a tactic, but even he will admit this is a pretty straightforward interview if my instincts are correct. Candidates can make up their own minds. Yes SoapBoxMom, you would not be approved unless you lied--which you are stellar at.

---

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by SoapBoxDad

To everyone else, I challenge you to find another home-based business that requires an interview and approval. Folks there is a lot of garbage out there, spend your time more wisely. I appreciate the opportunity to share this.

---

AC's interview is by no means even remotely "unique to the industry." You have made this claim in many of your posts, and it is time to refute it.

This is standard operating procedure for this type of company. Out of the several I can point to, one that I have extensive personal experience with is Robert Alan's "No Money Down" mentoring program (at least, that's what it was called back when I went through their 'stringent' interview process; now, I believe it's called "The One Minute Millionaire.") Theirs was almost identical to the interview posted above, both in content and underlying motive. There was a written questionnaire/interview followed by two phone interviews.

Here's how it works: by the time the prospect is filling out the initial qualifying interview, he is already partly sold on the concept.

The company has planned this out very carefully and deliberately. They know that everyone filling out the form has already whetted their appetites on the company's website, which lists testimonial after testimonial of affiliates who say they became wealthy using the program. These people look pretty normal, he thinks to himself. I don't see why that couldn't be me. The prospect has begun to salivate: Mission One accomplished.

The problem the company now faces? – the prospect does not yet know about outrageous price tag, which they realize no rational human being in their right mind would ever pay. 'Right mind' are the important words to focus on here.

To solve this dilemma, Mission Two's purpose becomes to gradually move the prospect away from rational, objective thought and toward a mental state that facilitates a situation where the prospect is practically begging you to let him pay the $10,000 fee, and when you eventually oblige him, he feels as though he just got the deal of a lifetime. This may sound like an impossible task, but it's Salesmanship 101 and fairly simple to achieve, and it is where the 'interview process' comes into play.

The Interview Process Accomplishes Two Important Things:

- 1.) It provides the company with the appearance of legitimacy. If this was a scam, they wouldn't be so careful about who they let in, would they? It is used to build up that all-too-important credibility factor, which, due to the program's exorbitant cost, will be vital in closing the prospect.
- 2.) It utilizes reverse-psychology (and to great effect) to manipulate the situation to the point where the prospect begins selling himself to the company – as if it is an actual interview, and he is speaking to the manager of a Fortune 500 company! You would be amazed at how quickly they can move a seemingly intelligent person into this frame of mind. In fact, it has very little to do with intelligence and everything to do with the prevailing thoughts running through the prospect's subconscious at this time.

Their questions are geared toward making the prospect want to convince the company how hard-working and dedicated he is:

Quote:

---

Are you a positive, enthusiastic person and are you able to maintain "Positive Expectancy" for the long run and amidst all circumstances?

"Winners never quit" - can you be consistent and persistent for an extended period of time – however long it takes to accomplish what it is you want to accomplish (question #5)?

"Quitters never win" - do you understand that should you quit you will lose your money, time, and any contacts you may have introduced to your business?.

---

Once he has completed the written portion, he is invited to speak with a representative. Whew! he thinks to himself. That was pretty thorough, but I made it to the next step.

The phone interviewer asks questions similar in nature to those found on the questionnaire. They are targeted at the prospect's sense of self-worth, and ever-hinting at the company's "strict selectiveness" in choosing those it will accept.

In addition, the rep makes intermittent comments that seem to suggest he is constantly on the verge of turning the prospect down. "I don't know, John -- we only want the most serious and motivated people to join us, and it sounds like you might not be right for this..." which elicits from the prospect a gut response: Wait! No, I've got what it takes. I'm dead serious about this and am willing to go the distance!

He does this without thinking; he almost can't help it. Human beings possess a strong emotional desire to appear valuable and capable in the eyes of others. Our gut reaction is to defend ourselves and our abilities, which is precisely the purpose behind the company's 'cautious' approach. Consequently, the interviewee does his best to prove himself, touting his work ethic, dedication, etc... shifting even deeper into a defensive state of mind, and unconsciously elevating the company's prestige (as he perceives it) in the process.

The company rep has now effectively done his job; he no longer has to try to sell the prospect on the program; the prospect is now trying to sell him on his own worthiness to become a member. The interviewer will push the prospect as far on the defensive as he possibly can, and, once he has reached the ideal point – once the tables have turned a complete 180-degrees – he closes the deal.

The prospect hangs up the phone, both exhilarated and relieved that he made it through the phone interview, and that the company has agreed to take his $10,000 payment and given him the chance to reap the vast riches that surely await him.

These are nothing more than slight-of-hand parlor tricks. Salesmen and con artists alike have used reverse psychology for hundreds of years and will continue to use it as long as the human psyche possesses the capacity to be taken.

yossarian

07-07-2006 06:07 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Tim Darnell is no different than Benny Hinn; he's just more sophisticated in his methods.

openQuestion

07-07-2006 06:20 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by yossarian

I wrote the following post in response to SBD's claim that their President's interview was "unique" to their business and served to filter out people who really aren't cut out for AC.

AC's interview is by no means even remotely "unique to the industry." You have made this claim in many of your posts, and it is time to refute it.

This is standard operating procedure for this type of company. Out of the several I can point to, one that I have extensive personal experience with is Robert Alan's "No Money Down" mentoring program (at least, that's what it was called back when I went through their 'stringent' interview process; now, I believe it's called "The One Minute Millionaire.") Theirs was almost identical to the interview posted above, both in content and underlying motive. There was a written questionnaire/interview followed by two phone interviews.

Here's how it works: by the time the prospect is filling out the initial qualifying interview, he is already partly sold on the concept.

The company has planned this out very carefully and deliberately. They know that everyone filling out the form has already whetted their appetites on the company's website, which lists testimonial after testimonial of affiliates who say they became wealthy using the program. These people look pretty normal, he thinks to himself. I don't see why that couldn't be me. The prospect has begun to salivate: Mission One accomplished.

The problem the company now faces? The prospect does not yet know about outrageous price tag, which they realize no rational human being in their right mind would ever pay. Right mind are the important words to focus on here.

To solve this dilemma, Mission Two's purpose becomes to gradually move the prospect away from rational, objective thought and toward a mental state that facilitates a situation where the prospect is practically begging you to let him pay the $10,000 fee, and when you eventually oblige him, he feels as though he just got the deal of a lifetime. This may sound like an impossible task, but it's Salesmanship 101 and fairly simple to achieve, and it is where the 'interview process' comes into play.

The Interview Process Accomplishes Two Important Things:

1.) It provides the company with the appearance of legitimacy. If this was a scam, they wouldn't be so careful about who they let in, would they? It is used to build up that all-too-important credibility factor, which, due to the program's exorbitant cost, will be vital in closing the prospect.

2.) It utilizes reverse-psychology (and to great effect) to manipulate the situation to the point where the prospect begins selling himself to the company as if it is an actual interview, and he is speaking to the manager of a Fortune 500 company! You would be amazed at how quickly they can move a seemingly intelligent person into this frame of mind. In fact, it has very little to do with intelligence and everything to do with the prevailing thoughts running through the prospect's subconscious at this time.

Their questions are geared toward making the prospect want to convince the company how hard-working and dedicated he is:

Once he has completed the written portion, he is invited to speak with a representative. Whew! he thinks to himself. That was pretty thorough, but I made it to the next step.

The phone interviewer asks questions similar in nature to those found on the questionnaire. They are targeted at the prospect's sense of self-worth, and ever-hinting at the company's "strict selectiveness" in choosing those it will accept.

In addition, the rep makes intermittent comments that seem to suggest he is constantly on the verge of turning the prospect down. I don't know, John -- we only want the most serious and motivated people to join us, and it sounds like you might not be right for this which elicits from the prospect a gut response: Wait! No, I've got what it takes. I'm dead serious about this and am willing to go the distance!

He does this without thinking; he almost can't help it. Human beings possess a strong emotional desire to appear valuable and capable in the eyes of others. Our gut reaction is to defend ourselves and our abilities, which is precisely the purpose behind the company's cautious approach. Consequently, the interviewee does his best to prove himself, touting his work ethic, dedication, etc. shifting even deeper into a defensive state of mind, and unconsciously elevating the company's prestige (as he perceives it) in the process.

The company rep has now effectively done his job; he no longer has to try to sell the prospect on the program; the prospect is now trying to sell him on his own worthiness to become a member. The interviewer will push the prospect as far on the defensive as he possibly can, and, once he has reached the ideal point once the tables have turned a complete 180-degrees he closes the deal.

The prospect hangs up the phone, both exhilarated and relieved that he made it through the phone interview, and that the company has agreed to take his $10,000 payment and given him the chance to reap the vast riches that surely await him.

These are nothing more than slight-of-hand parlor tricks. Salesmen and con artists alike have used reverse psychology for hundreds of years and will continue to use it as long as the human psyche possesses the capacity to be taken.

---

Wow! Really enjoyed reading this post! It is an excellent and thorough portrait of a time-honed sales technique. It once again focuses us on the fact that these guys are, first and foremost, SALESMEN, and the "product" they are selling is simply the opportunity. Very nice read!

Oh, and on the God and Christian aspects of this whole thing...yes, your Christian beliefs should certainly be reflected in the way you operate your business and run your life. However, constantly blabbing and bragging about it is distasteful at best, manipulative at worst. The people you are in business with should know what kind of person you are simply by the way you act and how you treat others. Flapping your gums constantly about how Christian and God-like you are is, in my opinion, kinda weak.

vamapega

07-07-2006 06:46 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by openQuestion

vamapega, I think I've been as fair and unbiased as just about anyone on this thread. But you, my friend, are going to break your back trying to bend over that far to be "fair". There have been some compelling facts about this company posted on this thread, and a lot of opinions. The "single BBB complaint" thing is such a tiny, tiny point that I can hardly believe you would use that and that alone to come to a decision about this. The jury will ALWAYS be out on this one (and on many others of this ilk) simply because the companies themselves refuse to provide factual backing and real numbers. And it is on THEM to provide this, as they are asking people to make (in this case) a major investment, one which you yourself admitted you could never afford. Before I invested that kind of money in anything, I would need to see a LOT of numbers, X's and O's. Trust me: they will NOT be forthcoming. They would be bad for business.

---

You have it wrong. The bbb report doesn't rule out the possibility that this company might be unscrupulous. However, it gives more weight to their scruples than the many people in here who use vulgarities and ad hominem to support their accusations against AC in stating that they are unscrupulous.

Truth is, there are certain people in here who aren't even worth listening to. So it doesn't matter how well they craft their arguments, their character speaks volumes about their ill-willed agenda, which by the way makes their position highly questionable.

vamapega

07-07-2006 06:51 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by yossarian

**When I wrote the above post, I was not aware of the high cost of the program, which in my estimation is grossly exorbitant for the service provided.**

---

I agree. Anyone can go to the local library to get this information, so why pay $10,000 for it?

It is a legitimate question.

openQuestion

07-07-2006 06:59 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by vamapega

You have it wrong. The bbb report doesn't rule out the possibility that this company might be unscrupulous. However, it gives more weight to their scruples than the many people in here who use vulgarities and ad hominem to support their accusations against AC in stating that they are unscrupulous.

---

No, the BBB report is a very, very minor point to this whole discussion, and I stand by that opinion 100%.

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by vamapega

Truth is, there are certain people in here who aren't even worth listening to. So it doesn't matter how well they craft their arguments, their character speaks volumes about their ill-willed agenda, which by the way makes their position highly questionable.

---

And who specifically might you be referring to with those comments, pray tell?? If you are going to call people out, you might want to do it by name so that ALL of us don't take offense.

And what do you know of anyone's "agenda" or "character"? Seems like that would, by definition, have to be simple speculation/opinion on YOUR part, as you have no idea who any of us might be nor what we are about...and we don't know about YOU, either. But yes, I will agree that there are people around here -- around EVERYWHERE actually -- who have a lot of pent-up rage for whatever reasons. Not my place to judge them, either, though. If you want to judge their "scruples", feel free. To me, the use of bad or questionable language doesn't necessarily make someone a bad person. But that's just me.

vamapega

07-07-2006 07:00 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by yossarian

I wrote the following post in response to SBD's claim that their President's interview was "unique" to their business and served to filter out people who really aren't cut out for AC.

AC's interview is by no means even remotely "unique to the industry." You have made this claim in many of your posts, and it is time to refute it.

This is standard operating procedure for this type of company. Out of the several I can point to, one that I have extensive personal experience with is Robert Alan's "No Money Down" mentoring program (at least, that's what it was called back when I went through their 'stringent' interview process; now, I believe it's called "The One Minute Millionaire.") Theirs was almost identical to the interview posted above, both in content and underlying motive. There was a written questionnaire/interview followed by two phone interviews.

Here's how it works: by the time the prospect is filling out the initial qualifying interview, he is already partly sold on the concept.

The company has planned this out very carefully and deliberately. They know that everyone filling out the form has already whetted their appetites on the company's website, which lists testimonial after testimonial of affiliates who say they became wealthy using the program. These people look pretty normal, he thinks to himself. I don't see why that couldn't be me. The prospect has begun to salivate: Mission One accomplished.

The problem the company now faces? – the prospect does not yet know about outrageous price tag, which they realize no rational human being in their right mind would ever pay. 'Right mind' are the important words to focus on here.

To solve this dilemma, Mission Two's purpose becomes to gradually move the prospect away from rational, objective thought and toward a mental state that facilitates a situation where the prospect is practically begging you to let him pay the $10,000 fee, and when you eventually oblige him, he feels as though he just got the deal of a lifetime. This may sound like an impossible task, but it's Salesmanship101 and fairly simple to achieve, and it is where the 'interview process' comes into play.

The Interview Process Accomplishes Two Important Things:

1.) It provides the company with the appearance of legitimacy. If this was a scam, they wouldn't be so careful about who they let in, would they? It is used to build up that all-too-important credibility factor, which, due to the program's exorbitant cost, will be vital in closing the prospect.

2.) It utilizes reverse-psychology (and to great effect) to manipulate the situation to the point where the prospect begins selling himself to the company – as if it is an actual interview, and he is speaking to the manager of a Fortune 500 company! You would be amazed at how quickly they can move a seemingly intelligent person into this frame of mind. In fact, it has very little to do with intelligence and everything to do with the prevailing thoughts running through the prospect's subconscious at this time.

Their questions are geared toward making the prospect want to convince the company how hard-working and dedicated he is:

Once he has completed the written portion, he is invited to speak with a representative. Whew! he thinks to himself. That was pretty thorough, but I made it to the next step.

The phone interviewer asks questions similar in nature to those found on the questionnaire. They are targeted at the prospect's sense of self-worth, and ever-hinting at the company's "strict selectiveness" in choosing those it will accept.

In addition, the rep makes intermittent comments that seem to suggest he is constantly on the verge of turning the prospect down. "I don't know, John -- we only want the most serious and motivated people to join us, and it sounds like you might not be right for this..." which elicits from the prospect a gut response: Wait! No, I've got what it takes. I'm dead serious about this and am willing to go the distance!

He does this without thinking; he almost can't help it. Human beings possess a strong emotional desire to appear valuable and capable in the eyes of others. Our gut reaction is to defend ourselves and our abilities, which is precisely the purpose behind the company's 'cautious' approach. Consequently, the interviewee does his best to prove himself, touting his work ethic, dedication, etc... shifting even deeper into a defensive state of mind, and unconsciously elevating the company's prestige (as he perceives it) in the process.

The company rep has now effectively done his job; he no longer has to try to sell the prospect on the program; the prospect is now trying to sell him on his own worthiness to become a member. The interviewer will push the prospect as far on the defensive as he possibly can, and, once he has reached the ideal point – once the tables have turned a complete 180-degrees – he closes the deal.

The prospect hangs up the phone, both exhilarated and relieved that he made it through the phone interview, and that the company has agreed to take his $10,000 payment and given him the chance to reap the vast riches that surely await him.

These are nothing more than slight-of-hand parlor tricks. Salesmen and con artists alike have used reverse psychology for hundreds of years and will continue to use it as long as the human psyche possesses the capacity to be taken.

---

Alas, a post worth reading!

I think it is important to note however, that selling is not intrinsically evil. It's what you sell, and in many cases how you sell it, that makes selling bad.

Nevertheless, every sale fosters some form of manipulation. It's virtually inevitable not to manipulate a sale. Therefore, we have to discern the difference between manipulation that is morally appropriate as opposed to the kind that is unscrupulous. And for the most part, only the one who is doing the selling can know the difference, for he is fully aware of his motives for selling. Certain ideas that reside in his sales pitch can give us an indication of what his motive might be, but since every sale involves manipulation of some form it is quite difficult to detect ill-willed motives.

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Vamapega,

Add 2 and 2 together. You're almost there.....

You already agree that the price of the conference is outrageous. Now you agree that sales can be manipulative.

Have you been through their 3 steps?

Inflated price tag + manipulation = unscrupulous.

seems logical to me.....anyone else?

vamapega

07-07-2006 07:15 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by openQuestion

No, the BBB report is a very, very minor point to this whole discussion, and I stand by that opinion 100%.

---

But see, here you clearly state that it is your opinion that the bbb report isn't very reliable here. Yet, it is still a fact, not an opinion, that a report has been made with the bbb against AC, and only one report nonetheless in the past 36 months.

This bears more weight than what you are giving it credit for, in my opinion.

Nevertheless, as I had stated already, this single report does not rule out the possibility that AC might be unscrupulous. However, it does work in their favor.

Quote:

---

And who specifically might you be referring to with those comments, pray tell?? If you are going to call people out, you might want to do it by name so that ALL of us don't take offense.

---

It should make no difference to you who I am referring to. And if you do take offense to what I had said then it is likely that you are feeling guilty about something that you had said to conclude that I am referring to you.

Quote:

---

And what do you know of anyone's "agenda" or "character"? Seems like that would, by definition, have to be simple speculation/opinion on YOUR part, as you have no idea who any of us might be nor what we are about...and we don't know about YOU, either. But yes, I will agree that there are people around here -- around EVERYWHERE actually -- who have a lot of pent-up rage for whatever reasons. Not my place to judge them, either, though. If you want to judge their "scruples", feel free. To me, the use of bad or questionable language doesn't necessarily make someone a bad person. But that's just me.

---

Actually, a post can tell you quite a lot about a person's character.

You are aware of this passage I hope:

"The good man brings good things out of the good stored up in him, and the evil man brings evil things out of the evil stored up in him. But I tell you that men will have to give account on the day of judgment for every careless word they have spoken. For by your words you will be acquitted, and by your words you will be condemned." Matt. 12:35-37

My advice to you concerning this is that you should avoid encouraging blasphemers to strike others down with their hateful words. And you know who I am referring to.

vamapega

07-07-2006 07:22 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by the411
Vamapega,

Add 2 and 2 together. You're almost there.....

You already agree that the price of the conference is outrageous. Now you agree that sales can be manipulative.

Have you been through their 3 steps?

Inflated price tag + manipulation = unscrupulous.

seems logical to me.....anyone else?

---

It's not that simple...

Although, it does pose a red flag.

You see, we still need more evidence before making an absolute conclusion.

Someone had mentioned that a law will be passed that will force MLM businesses to disclose all sales transactions, to give prospects an opportunity to see if they are legit. When this happens, then we will know for sure if AC is unscrupulous or not.

As it stands right now, I just can't put myself in a position to invest in their company, not only because I can't afford it, but even if I could I wouldn't because of this red flag.

openQuestion

07-07-2006 07:31 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by vamapega

But see, here you clearly state that it is your opinion that the bbb report isn't very reliable here. Yet, it is still a fact, not an opinion, that a report has been made with the bbb against AC, and only one report nonetheless in the past 36 months.

This bears more weight than what you are giving it credit for, in my opinion.

---

No, I never said the report isn't reliable. Those are YOUR words. I have no way of knowing about that. I simply don't give it a ton of weight in this thread/argument.

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by vamapega

Nevertheless, as I had stated already, this single report does not rule out the possibility that AC might be unscrupulous. However, it does work in their favor.

---

Just to be clear, I've never said they were unscrupulous because I don't know enough about them to make such a value judgment or form an opinion. Like you, I simply think the whole thing is at least in question. And I also think the business model is a joke.

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by vamapega

It should make no difference to you who I am referring to. And if you do take offense to what I had said then it is likely that you are feeling guilty about something that you had said to conclude that I am referring to you.

---

Sorry, but I have a very clear conscience. However, I maintain that if you are going to insult people, you are nothing but a coward unless you do it specifically. So please name names (handles) or stop flaming.

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by vamapega

Actually, a post can tell you quite a lot about a person's character.

---

Oh? And what do my posts tell you about me, my wise friend?

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by vamapega

You are aware of this passage I hope:

"The good man brings good things out of the good stored up in him, and the evil man brings evil things out of the evil stored up in him. But I tell you that men will have to give account on the day of judgment for every careless word they have spoken. For by your words you will be acquitted, and by your words you will be condemned." Matt. 12:35-37

My advice to you concerning this is that you should avoid encouraging blasphemers to strike others down with their hateful words. And you know who I am referring to.

---

Again, I have to repeat myself. If this company is indeed as bad as many think they are -- and I do NOT know this myself and have never stated anything of the sort -- then LET THEM BE BLASTED. Were the people who called Hitler a creep, murderer or worse BAD people? Or were they simply good people who recognized evil and spoke out against it?

So my advice to you, my all-knowing friend, is to learn who the "blasphemers" really are prior to condemning people to hell for speaking out against something they believe is not right.

the411

07-07-2006 07:34 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

vamapega,

If your research has enabled you to appropriately identify the red flags around Advantage Conferences, then this discussion has been worthwhile. I believe that the ultimate reason this thread exist is for people to consider these red flags and how they should exercise extreme caution when faced with claims such as those made by Advantage Conferences.

It is my suspicion that honest well-meaning customers will reach the same conclusion as you vamapega. If the price itself is not enough of a deterrant, the the undeniable red flags certainly should be.

People, be extremely cautious when reviewing this company.

openQuestion

07-07-2006 07:35 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by vamapega

You see, we still need more evidence before making an absolute conclusion.

---

Yup. But please note how unwilling this company (and in fact, most companies in this industry share that fault) is to provide numbers.

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by vamapega

Someone had mentioned that a law will be passed that will force MLM businesses to disclose all sales transactions, to give prospects an opportunity to see if they are legit. When this happens, then we will know for sure if AC is unscrupulous or not.

---

Funny how EVERY MLM company is up in arms against this law, a law which is simply asking them to tell the truth. No one has been able to explain that to me yet...other than to yip and yap about how much more work and expense it would be for the companies themselves. If they made the companies reveal this information on their websites, that would CLEARLY not be a big expense for ANY of them, so they are full of it.

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by vamapega

As it stands right now, I just can't put myself in a position to invest in their company, not only because I can't afford it, but even if I could I wouldn't because of this red flag.

---

As I said, the business model just seems dumb to me. But that's just one nit-wits opinion, and nothing more.

Wishyouknew

07-07-2006 08:52 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

I know for fact that 5 or 6 people have filed complaints againts AC with the BBB and Attorney General.

I myself have faced threats from Tim Darnell of lawsuits. How many other people have faced those same threats and are scared to file a complaint or go to the authorities.?? Who knows?

Tim Darnell used their refunds over their head to get some to remove the complaints from the file. However, it is my understanding that the BBB will not remove a complaint from their record.

I can come on scam.com with out Tim knowing who I am because I know for fact that Tim has many enemies out there who he has had scamed, lied to and had disagreements with.

There are too many of them for Tim to figure out who I am.

the411

07-07-2006 09:51 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by poweroldglory

I hate it when people come on and spew their garbage because of their inability to make something work and prefer to blame someone else. :mad: I hate it when utter nut jobs like SBM and Renloxy vomit their irrelevant and irreverant drivel all over the ethernet. :mad:

So if thats what you mean by hate filled then I stand guilty. I can feel the bile rising up inside again. I don't hate you, I hate the fact that you are so bilious towards a company and its personnel for no other reason other than you feel the company failed you and not the other way around.

---

Would you like to know one of the topics on the latest mindset calls? I was not on the call personally, but here are the words of an AC Rep:

"Tim, I commend you for your powerful message.

In my 15 plus years in MLM and networking I discovered one thing. When someone failed in their business, the excuses started pouring in... they never blamed themselves.

It was always their sponsor, or the products, or the company. Just a lot of excuses why they did not succeed, when in reality they should have looked inside themselves."--Barbara Kardokus

PowerOldGlory.....Tim Darnell?? hmmm???

deepsouth

07-08-2006 12:16 AM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by Wishyouknew

I know for fact that 5 or 6 people have filed complaints againts AC with the BBB and Attorney General.

---

There's also a lot of people like me that haven't filed that would highly recommend people not lose their hard earned money with AC.

I haven't filed because I know I'll never see one cent of my money.

If I had to guess, I would guess that 95%+ of those that join AC wish they had never heard of it after about six months. I know that's how I feel.

Soapboxmom

07-08-2006 07:49 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by SoapBoxDad

Yes, SoapBoxMom and Wishyouknew, you should be very careful about that which you write, especially when it is knowingly false. Keep up with the evidence. You will not be able to hide behind, well I thought that was the truth, well I was just sharing my opinion acting as if I had a competency in this industry, blah, blah, blah.

---

You do amuse me, you buffoon. Timmy boy threatens to sue folks in a desperate and pathetic attempt to silence them. If he was lucky enough to find us all he could do is try to break us financially with the monumental cost of fighting his frivolous suit, which would be horrendously expensive for him as well. There is nothing on here that is remotely actionable. Timmy just has grandiose fantasies that he is a warrior and that God is on his side. He wouldn't dare meet any of us in court because then he and his reps would be forced to go through depositions and all his and ACs' financials and records would have to be disclosed. The only way one could prove a case like this is through fully disclosing all the details about the business in question, so he will never let this actually get to court.

You goons can threaten me all you want. I will just keep endlessly quoting the fraudulent earnings claims that have been made and keep doing that special MLM math.

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by SoapBoxDad

As for me, I have great peace as everything that I have written can be backed up and is truthful. Unlike those on this thread where they feel the end justifies their means, they will be accountable in more than one way. Good luck to you with that.

---

Oh please! I have only quoted your little scamming friends, made earnings calculations based on the available info, expressed my opinion and referenced MLM education sites. The only lies on this thread are from the pages of AC and its reps.

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by SoapBoxDad

AS for credibility, I have my MBA, have built mutiple million dollar businesses and we have attracted fellow millionaires, pastors, doctors, entrepreneurs, and people from various professions and stay at home Moms and Dads.

I am proud of the folks that we attract into our business and I pray every day that the right people are attracted to AC and that the wrong people--you know who you are, stay away from Advantage Conferences. Life is too short to work with folks like you, WishYouKnew, Renloyx and Phinnly.

---

If you have built multi-million dollar businesses why in the heck do you need to peddle this scheme?

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by SoapBoxDad

Business is great and enjoying time with the family while it builds. Praise the Lord and there is no other business I would rather be building right now. Reading through this thread over the past week, I did not see one post even worth the time to respond to.

---

<http://www.scam.com/showpost.php?p=2...postcount=1250>

<http://www.scam.com/showpost.php?p=2...postcount=1248>

I again referenced all the fraudulent earnings claims, so you can't respond to those posts. All your talk of how it is Christ-centered and AC is not making ridiculous earnings claims has been blown out of the water, scammer.

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by SoapBoxDad

It is a shame you folks cannot get paid by your inaccuracies or the size of your lies. Maybe you should try the Star or Enquirer.

I do continue to pray for you.

---

Again, I have to demand you specifically reference said whoppers and refute them with verifiable facts, my boy. Good luck with that, scammer! I would never accept remuneration for helping folks avoid scams like this!

Oh and tell that litigious goon, Timmy boy, to get his hind end on here and I will be happy to discuss this bum scheme with him. This is the court of public opinion here. Does he have the moxie to face me here?

Soapboxmom

Unlucky36

07-08-2006 08:18 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by Soapboxmom

You do amuse me, you buffoon. Timmy boy threatens to sue folks in a desperate and pathetic attempt to silence them. If he was lucky enough to find us all he could do is try to break us financially with the monumental cost of fighting his frivolous suit, which would be horrendously expensive for him as well. There is nothing on here that is remotely actionable. Timmy just has grandiose fantasies that he is a warrior and that God is on his side. He wouldn't dare meet any of us in court because then he and his reps would be forced to go through depositions and all his and ACs' financials and records would have to be disclosed. The only way one could prove a case like this is through fully disclosing all the details about the business in question, so he will never let this actually get to court.

You goons can threaten me all you want. I will just keep endlessly quoting the fraudulent earnings claims that have been made and keep doing that special MLM math.

Oh please! I have only quoted your little scamming friends, made earnings calculations based on the available info, expressed my opinion and referenced MLM education sites. The only lies on this thread are from the pages of AC and its reps.

If you have built multi-million dollar businesses why in the heck do you need to peddle this scheme?

<http://www.scam.com/showpost.php?p=2...postcount=1250>

<http://www.scam.com/showpost.php?p=2...postcount=1248>

I again referenced all the fraudulent earnings claims, so you can't respond to those posts. All your talk of how it is Christ-centered and AC is not making ridiculous earnings claims has been blown out of the water, scammer.

Again, I have to demand you specifically reference said whoppers and refute them with verifiable facts, my boy. Good luck with that, scammer! I would never accept remuneration for helping folks avoid scams like this!

Oh and tell that litigious goon, Timmy boy, to get his hind end on here and I will be happy to discuss this bum scheme with him. This is the court of public opinion here. Does he have the moxie to face me here?

Soapboxmom

---

You Go Soapboxmom. I love the fact that you hate scammers like me! Especially a lying little weasel like Tim Darnell. He is so damn dilusional. And he calls himself a christian? Hmmmm! I bet God is looking down on this earth thinking: I can't believe what has happened to society. Scammers are multiplying like hornets, they're almost impossible to get rid of. If we didn't have so many morons brainwashed in these schemes thinking they're gonna be rich blah blah, we'd have a much better chance!

Go get em girl :)

Wishyouknew

07-08-2006 08:20 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Soapboxmom,

you make many great points. I am sure Tim Darnell probably thought he could strong arm the Better Business Bureau into taking down their report. Last I check it is still there in the same verbage from the start.

I have a hard time thinking that the BBB would back down to some guy who is officing out of his home.

Tim, must be crapping his pants at the thought of this thing going to trial.

Soapboxdad, speaking of the trial? When will that be? What is the latest on how that is going for Advantage Conferences?

If Tim's lawyers were smart and not money hungry they would advise Tim to give up a fight that he can't win.

But, if he did give this fight up he would loose all his credability with his reps risk loosing his following thus his business would crumble.

I think Tim has backed himself into a corner with this suit that the success or failure of his business will hinge on this court case.

That was pretty stupid on Tim's part.

Unlucky36

07-08-2006 08:28 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by Wishyouknew
Soapboxmom,

you make many great points. I am sure Tim Darnell probably thought he could strong arm the Better Business Bureau into taking down their report. Last I check it is still there in the same verbage from the start.

I have a hard time thinking that the BBB would back down to some guy who is officing out of his home.

Tim, must be crapping his pants at the thought of this thing going to trial.

Soapboxdad, speaking of the trial? When will that be? What is the latest on how that is going for Advantage Conferences?

If Tim's lawyers were smart and not money hungry they would advise Tim to give up a fight that he can't win.

But, if he did give this fight up he would loose all his credability with his reps risk loosing his following thus his business would crumble.

I think Tim has backed himself into a corner with this suit that the success or failure of his business will hinge on this court case.

That was pretty stupid on Tim's part.

---

I'm a total believer in what goes around, comes around. It is too funny when these scammers know when they're lies and bullcrap catches up to them, they really crumble quick. They act tough when they have their clan support em, but when they end up alone they're so weak it's too funny.

After crapping in his pants, he will have use for alot of imodium AD :D

Soapboxmom

07-08-2006 09:44 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by Wishyouknew
Soapboxmom,

you make many great points. I am sure Tim Darnell probably thought he could strong arm the Better Business Bureau into taking down their report. Last I check it is still there in the same verbage from the start.

I have a hard time thinking that the BBB would back down to some guy who is officing out of his home.

Tim, must be crapping his pants at the thought of this thing going to trial.

Soapboxdad, speaking of the trial? When will that be? What is the latest on how that is going for Advantage Conferences?

If Tim's lawyers were smart and not money hungry they would advise Tim to give up a fight that he can't win.

But, if he did give this fight up he would loose all his credability with his reps risk loosing his following thus his business would crumble.

I think Tim has backed himself into a corner with this suit that the success or failure of his business will hinge on this court case.

That was pretty stupid on Tim's part.

---

Excellent points. I am sure Timmy is regretting his decision to sue the BBB and consumer advocate Dr. Jon Taylor. All the AC records are likely to be subpoenaed in these court cases and everyone will be subjected to grueling depositions. Timmy boy is in way over his head. You are right about him not being able to back down without losing credibility in front of his flock.

I think it is hilarious that you and I are the scambusters he is most desperate to silence. There are so many brilliant posters on this board that are tearing this bum deal up. I guess it must be especially embarassing to have a stay at home mom with a calculator exposing this scam for the world to see. Keep up the good work!

Soapboxmom

Unlucky36

07-08-2006 09:47 PM

---

Re: Advantages Conferences / Tim Darnell

Quote:

---

Originally Posted by Soapboxmom

Excellent points. I am sure Timmy is regretting his decision to sue the BBB and consumer advocate Dr. Jon Taylor. All the AC records are likely to be subpoenaed in these court cases and everyone will be subjected to grueling depositions. Timmy boy is in way over his head. You are right about him not being able to back down without losing credibility in front of his flock.

I think it is hilarious that you and I are the scambusters he is most desperate to silence. There are so many brilliant posters on this board that are tearing this bum deal up. I guess it must be especially embarassing to have a stay at home mom with a calculator exposing this scam for the world to see. Keep up the good work!

Soapboxmom

T he ti m e n o w is 0 9:
1
6
P
M
.

Scams Message Board - Copyright ? 2004 Scam.com , All Rights Reserved.