(Oh! and don't forget the $15 per month admin fee)

If the advertising doesn't "work well" how is anybody making any money other than desperately recruiting new victims?

(over 6000 Banners Broker vids on YouTube now)

How much time do you guys think Banners Broker has left?

advertising is part of it, jesus can you not read the whole thread?? If you dont agree like the other guys here and have strong opinions then thats your prerogative, but your asking about ONE HALF of a package which is ONE THIRD of the packages they offer at the moment.

read my post, i said it doesnt work well but im not experienced in advertising so maybe im getting my numbers wrong, i honestly dont know about that side of the business hence i have tried it once, the other side is quite simply making me a fortune and there is absolutely no way that new members money could pay out the sums that are involved. You might think you know the numbers involved but trust me its probably a lot more than your even thinking and thats why it could not possibly be a ponzi, it would have gone bust long long ago.

I don't think you have made any money yet. You have numbers on a screen but they don't count. On the other point, if the advertising doesn't work then the only money being brought in by Banners broker is new people's seed money.

I just don't understand why people aren't running for the hills when it was pointed out that they are faking foreign addresses including one at an auto mechanics garage.

Greed is one of the most powerful motivators.

Thing is, I don't expect the government to do anything for a while yet. They are always slow to move. I also figure the jurisdiction issue could slow things even more.

Nah. Jurisdiction won't be a problem with this one. It could add to the prosecutions though.

Re: Banners Broker

You really think so?

Probably should qualify my statement. Do you really think that the SEC will think that Banners broker is a valuable use of their time and resources. Politics is the true motivator of all these cases and I don't know is there much political collateral to be gained chasing this crowd as they are (supposedly) not even operating in the states.

We may have to wait for this thing to implode itself. There will be an awful lot of damage done at that stage...

Its not rocket science.... You put in some money (not more than you can afford to loose)... You make some profit, withdraw your original money and then start making money off the profits.

I know MANY people who are making a very good passive income off of this (all around $100-$150 a day). I also know other people who have been doing this for much longer, invested a lot and are now making $150,000 profit every year.

I have got all of my originally invested money back and now i am making great money off my profits.

Cheers,

Are they selling any ad space to people not in BB? Any publishers not in BB? Names please. I'm sure they won't tell you anyway.

Where is outside money coming in to pay for all these profits?

Scammers keep tapping into the intangible market, i.e. advertising or auto-surfing - Like selling air.

Create a spuedo website, then sell space on it, and it all looks like a legit product.

You never know where the bottom is. Could be you!! Just ask the adsurfdaily folks who lost millions. Btw, by the time asd hit scam.com, the end was near. Scary huh?

if u try to think logically, there is no problem to find web sites that wants to get payed for advertisements u can have plenty of them. more problem is to fined company that want to advertise, because they are paying the money. But if u give them a big pool of web sites and lower price for me its sounds logically.

These kind of so called "investment opportunities", are destined to collapse. And once this heppens everyone will wake up.

Allthough BB is trying hard to attract some real money from real advertisers, it seems that they have no chance of succeding to that direction. The reason is obvious. And that is the low level of customer satisfaction. There is no serious advertiser who would like to pay any money to get negligible real traffic and no profits. My opinion is that BB does not offer any actual competitive advantage over the competition in this field.

Hence they are trying to fucus their campaign with surgical precision, exactly to the real source of the money. And this is, you guessed it (!), new affiliates. In other words, new people jumping in the vehichle. And this is exactly THE characteristic of MLM. An other MLM that tries hard to identify itself as a pioneer in some field of business.

They managed to create a virtual wallet where everyone gets the illusion that earns money! And as such every member is likely to spread the word and act as the best advertising of the system.

But allas, the income of real money is by no chance enough to provide real returns to all those "opportunistic investors"! Either the number of affiliates needs to constantly increase geometrically or the asked withdrawals will eventually exceed the actual cash available. And then Armagedon!

The value of BB dishonesty can be calculated at any given time by subtracting the real cash from the sum of e-money accumulated in members accounts!

But the scammers encourage you not to withdraw money.

'cos it helps to "build your business"

In fact most people will pump more money in 'cos

No you are not, stop lying. If you were making actual money, the last place you would be looking at would be a site like this.

Why would you bother checking to see if banners broker was a scam if you had monetary proof that it wasn't?

You are fooling noone.

I actually was researching more about the business and came across this and laughed... You shouldn't waste so much time writing on here if you are not involved in bb. Why does it make you so angry? Is it that you wish you were brave enough to take the risk when others are proving to be making income?

You're right Joe, the more you leave in - the more you make and this is 100% true as i have seen it happen. Nothing in this world is certain and in the beginning I only put in $2,000 which i made back in 5.5 months. I took out my original $2000 I then let my profits build like they didn't exist and kept reinvesting the money. Its a shame that some people get greedy, so for their sakes fingers crossed it doesn't collapse. I guess i haven't invested like some so i'm not too fussed either way...but i can promise you, my money is continuing to grow which definitely excites me!
